What you are looking for in a kitten:

When considering whether a single or a pair is right for your home, please take into consideration that kittens homed as pairs often turn out to be more well socialised, and in turn more sociable and suitable for homes with other pets or children. Single kittens require much more work to make sure they are appropriately socialised, and can easily become bored or destructive in a home, particularly when left for significant amounts of time. Adopting a pair is often beneficial in homes with children, as it is less overwhelming if there are 2 cats to share the children's affections.
